Nancy Wynne Talks of the Horse Show and Other Out-of-Door Affairs-She Comments on Other Matters

WELL, they were all there—King Horse, Old Sol (though he hid his face pretty much all of the day); Tan Bark and Oval the whole business. And Mrs. Victor Mather and Mrs. Bill Clothier and Mrs. Bob Montgomery and Miss Ellen Lathrop Hopkins and R. Penn Smith and Sam Riddle and Barah Jeffords and Mrs. Altemus and everybody you ever saw at a horse show. except Eddie Cassatt and his famous "unerstandings," Bob Strawbridge, Victor Mather, Jack Valentine, Plunkett Stewart and the rest of the regular horse men. And comehow one missed those men tremendously, because there has not been a show without them for years and years.

I certainly enjoyed the cafeteria, though I was one of the few who was willing to show I'd been in one before. My dears, you would have had a fit to see some of the people saunter up and order things when they were supposed to pick up a tray and help themselves and then pass on out to the tables under the trees.

Mrs. Barklie made a dandy head raitress, and Mrs. Eddie Cassatt and Mrs. Bam Bell, Jr., doled out iced ten and sandwiches as if they had done it all their lives; but, you see, there was this difference, they were ready to do anything on earth to serve you and that in a hurry, and to make everything as pleasant and enjoyable as possible, and that is not to be said always of the proverbial cafeteria waitress, who clears off tables with one sweep and departs with a tray piled up to the top of the ceiling.

THE older members of the Emergency Aid discarded their warm, dark uniforms for white frocks and wore blue bands with the words Emergency Aid lettered on them instead. All except Mrs. Altemus, who looked very stunning with her hat cocked over one eye, as only Mrs. Altemus can cock it.

T WAS afraid the rain would come and spoil part of the affair, as it did at Vanity Fair the night before, though spoil that it could not have.

For in spite of pouring rain and a thunderstorm, "Vanity Fair" was one of the prettiest and most complete out-of-door fotes I have ever attended. The trellised booths along Pomander walk, the Covent Garden flowerstand, the wonderful models and their exquisite gowns and that most interesting auctioneer, Captain Schwab, who assured the women that a blue and white georgette crepe frock which he was colling would not have to be buttoned up the back, but could be "s-nn-apped." It was altogether charming.

I understand that any articles which had to be rushed into the clubhouse on account of the rain and could not be properly disposed of will be sold at a later day on the porch of one of the big country places out that way for the benefit of the hospital Perhaps Mrs. Lorimer, who was chairman of the whole exquisite affair, will hold the sale on her porch. I'll let you know when I hear.

But rain or not, it was beautiful, and anyway the rain did not come until 5:30 o'clock, and there was certainly much buying and selling of lovely things before that,

T SEE Sarah Baker and John Bell, Jr.'s wedding will take place on the 29th of the month. That's the second Baker wedding in the year 1917-1918. Linda was married last year, you remember, and now Sarah, while Sophie will probably be a close third. My best wishes to them all.

You know tomorrow the Home Defend-ers of Germantown and Chestnut Hill are going on hikes, separate ones, and are going to spend the night "out," sleeping, if at all, on the ground in blankets. The very rapidly growing son of one of them has been most anxious to go along. He talked so much about it that Daddy finally had to ask the captain if he could go with them The captain could stand it if he could, so Billy was given permission to, to his great delight. He has been on several Boy Scout hikes overnight, returning nearly always with a fine young cold in his head, so Dad was curious. "What makes you want to so so much? Do you think it will be fun?' he inquired. "Yes, I think it will be fun to take the hike." came back Billy, serenely, "and then I think it will be funny to see the old men trying to sleep on the ground." Impudence? Perhaps, but how NANCY WYNNE.

MENDING BROKEN LIVES AIM OF WAR WORKERS

Committee on Reconstruction Will Seek to Train Kaiser's Victims in New Lines

The committee on reconstruction of the National League for Woman's Service is being organized to deal, not with the reconstruction of villages and town, but the re-construction of men's broken bodies, and broken lives.

Its purpose is to fit men who come back from the fighting in France with a new hope in life, a trade or profession, whether they are blind or deaf or crippled, so they can begin again, skilled, perhaps, in some line of work and able to earn more money and to find more interest in life than before.

The committee is to deal with five divisions

It means that a freatment will be given men whose nerves are shattered from shell shock or some other cause, by training them in some branch of work. Occupational therapy has been practiced in Boston with remarkable results it is said.

remarkable results, it is said.

For this division of the nursing, only skilled workers will be taken, who are to train the men in various arts and crafts, as for ex-sumple, weaving and potiery. Only the doc-tor can diagnose the particular form of nervousness from which the patient is suffering and prescribe the branch of work best suited and prescribe the branch of work best suited to him as a treatment. The nurses, however, must be skillful in watching the patient, learning to read the signs of fatigue in his face even before he himself is conscious of the ranks cannot read or write—men from little mountain and country villages, western farms and the like.

To teach these men just the three R's, it is believed, will mean a step of vital im-portance in their lives. Other men, better educated, having perhaps made a beginning in some special line which lack of money and opportunity prevented them from carry-

WOMEN WAGE-EARNERS TO GATHER AT COLLEGE

Convention of National League of Workers to Be Held at Wellesley, June 20 to 24

Wellesley College will open its doors for the first time in its history to a gathering of working women when the convention of the National League of Women Workers is held there from June 20 to 24. Though the women wage-earners who will gather from many of the eastern States will hold their convention after commencement they will be the guests of the college and will be entertained in Tower Court and Claffin, the two new dormitory buildings of the college.

The college campus and buildings will be open to the women workers. They will have an opportunity for a few days to get inside information on college life and will become acquainted with the traditions of Wellesley.

From the Pennsylvania Association of Women Workers, made up of clubs in this State, will come reports of war gardens. Red Cross work and efforts made in Liberty of the clubs are taking part in the land army movement, the girls giving up their va-cations to raise food to help win the war.

W. White, of the Boston community centers; Miss Mary C. Wiggin, of the National Con-sumers' League, have also been asked to ing influence and a centralized outlet for their war activities.

The need of an unseifish industrial attitude will be emphasized by Miss Hamilton, who will urge girls engaged in nonessential industries to shift to essential industries during the period of the war.

bolized by the hope in the heart and capa-bility by the hoe in the hand.

The courage is inspired by patriotism of the highest order. Most of the farmerettes have left comfortable homes and easy posi-tions to do rough, unaccustomed work that will help their fathers, brothers and lovers "over there." "over there."

The capability of the girls is one of the great surprises of the war. If the farmers of the State selse the opportunity, the girls of the land army can solve Connecticut's farm-labor problem. This statement is made on the authority of a practical furnity who have a wast of the statement of the surprise of the surprise
